The Indiana Library Studies

The Indiana Library Studies represent the first statewide exploration of Indiana libraries of all types and of the library and information needs of Indiana's citizens. A federally funded research project of the Indiana State Library, the Studies are directed by Dr. Peter Hiatt, Consultant to the Indiana State Library and Associate Professor of Indiana University's Graduate Library School. Guidance for the project and advice on the reports have been provided by the Indiana Library Studies Advisory Committee:

Harriet E. Bard and Ralph Van Handel
Indiana Library Association

Anthony Cefali and Ray Fetterly
Indiana Library Trustees Association

Georgia Cole and Estella Reed
Indiana School Librarians Association

John H. Moriarty and Donald E. Thompson
College and University Roundtable of the Indiana Library Association

William H. Richardson and Ralph Simon
Indiana Chapter of the Special Libraries Association

Marcelle Foote, Director
Indiana State Library

INTRODUCTION

While collecting information for the Directory of Special and Subject Collections in Indiana the editors contacted every known library in Indiana except school libraries. The names and addresses of libraries were obtained from several sources. Since there was no single place to find all Indiana libraries listed, it seemed logical that a directory of Indiana libraires might be useful. This compilation is part of the Indiana Library Studies.

Several sources have been used: (1) American Library Directory (26th ed., 1968-69); (2) Public Libraries in Indiana, Name of Librarian, Telephone Number, Schedule of Hours Open, compiled by the Indiana State Library; (3) Indiana School Directory for the School year 1969-1970, compiled by the Indiana State Superintendent of Public Instruction; (4) Directory of Historical Societies and Agencies in the United States and Canada, 1967-1968, compiled by the American Association for State and Local History; (5) A Survey of Indiana Special Libraries and Information Centers (1969) by Brigitte L. Kenney; and (6) various types of information (such as mailing lists) supplied by the Extension Division of the Indiana State Library.

The list is arranged by public libraries, academic libraries, special libraries, libraires of Indiana state departments and institutions, school libraries, and historical societies. The name, address, and telephone number are given for all libraries.

It is hoped that there have been no omissions or errors. If any are found, the compilers will appreciate hearing about them.

SCHOOL LIBRARIES

Directory information has been taken from the Indiana School Directory for the School Year 1969-1970 compiled by the office of State Superintendent of Public Instruction. Because of the large number of school libraries, it has been necessary to limit the listings in two categories by making some arbitrary decisions.

The first category includes collections in headquarters for school corporations. Those libraries listed have reported more than 400 books in their central instructional materials center. This information was obtained from the Systems Level Report, Spring of 1969, sent to the Office of State Superintendent of Public Instruction.

The second category includes all other school libraries listed. The schools were selected as a result of responses to one question in the Spring 1969 Individual School Evaluation and Report-Instructional Materials Program. The question requested a description of the library's organizational pattern.

The first three alternatives were selected for this directory:

1. Instructional material (includes printed and audio-visual materials with space to use both).
2. Centralized library containing printed materials and separate audio-visual center.
3. Centralized library containing printed materials with space to use them.

Alternatives that were not included:

1. Central collections in buildings without space to use materials.
2. Classroom collections (cataloged).
3. Classroom collections (not cataloged).
4. Public libraries provide most of materials.
